The Saint who never increased the Price

It is reported that at the beginning, the eminent Saint, Hadrat Sayyiduna Sirri Saqti - may Allah be pleased with him, used to have a little shop. He had this policy that he will never make more than five percent profit in any item he sold.

Once, Hadrat Sayyiduna Sirri Saqti - may Allah be pleased with him - bought almonds for sixty rupees and a few days later the price of almond became very high. One agent then approached him and asked him the price of his almonds and he mentioned that it was about seventy three Dirhams. However, the agent mentioned that the price of almond in the market were over ninety Dirhams.

However, the great Saint replied, “I have made a promise to Allah Almighty that I will never take more than five percent in profit.”

The agent refused to buy this almond because he also felt guilty of selling this more than people could afford. In this manner, he did not purchase it for this lesser price and Hadrat Sayyiduna Sirri Saqti - may Allah be pleased with him - did not sell it for more than the price which he had already marked.

This is the quality of the Saints and this is what Sayyiduna Rasoolullah - may Allah's peace and blessings be upon him - has called "Deen". The name of religion is not to take a long Tasbeeh and wearing a long jubbah and walking around all the time actually pick-pocketing the people who come to buy.

This should also be a lesson for those who claim to be Muslim business people and it is also a lesson on how they should carry out their business. Even if they walk around their business with long Tasbeehs and kurtas all the while trying to cheat people, all this Tasbeeh and kurtas will be of no benefit to them on the Day of Judgement.
